

Wrongful Death

Accidents and injuries can have serious consequences and can sometimes lead to death. When an injury that leads to death is caused by someone's carelessness, recklessness, or negligence, that person may bear legal responsibility for what happened.

If you have lost a loved one because of another person's mistake or wrongful action, you may be able to bring their case to court in their place. You may need compensation to help cover medical bills, lost income and funeral expenses.

In addition, the court may award you with compensation for your loved one's pain and suffering and for your family's mental anguish and loss of companionship. You don't have to go through these difficult times alone or without support. The law is here to help you and your family, and so is The Law Offices Of Pitisci, Dowell, Markowitz & Murphy.